

WHAT'S
stem
GOT TO DO WITH IT?

Animal scientists and biological systems engineers tell us why certain animal products are useful for human use. For example, did you know that wool is made of a protein called “keratin” which consists of carbon, hydrogen, nitrogen and sulfur? Because of these unique properties, wool is sometimes used in housing insulation for both its thermal and flame-resistant properties.

Scientists—making sense of the natural world.

Want to learn more about science, technology, engineering and math at the State Fair?

Go to www.statefair.org/fair/thingstodo

